

Best Buy Named Among the “Best Places to Work” for the Fifth Straight Year

Best Buy was named among the “Best Places to Work” for the fifth straight year by the Human Rights Campaign Foundation, the nation’s largest civil rights organization working to achieve lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender equality. Companies receiving this distinction scored 100% on the Corporate Equality Index, indicating inclusive workplace policies for GLBT employees.

“The 2009 Corporate Equality Index shows that corporate America understands that a diverse workforce is critical to remaining successful and competitive,” said HRC Foundation President Joe Solmonese. To that end, Best Buy’s commitment to support local growth plans through the hiring and retention of diverse employees is gaining the attention of other large corporations.

About the Corporate Equality Index

The Human Rights Campaign Corporate Equality Index, first published in 2002, is an annual measure of how equitably large private businesses in the United States treat their gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender employees, consumers and investors. Ratings are based on factors like non-discrimination policies, diversity training and benefits for domestic partners and transgender employees.

Visit www.hrc.org for more information. Stay tuned for information regarding Best Buy’s upcoming Diversity Week, October 6-10!